Data Deletion Request: Compliance Response Matrix & Jurisdictional Analysis

Jurisdictions: Ghana (Act 843) | European Union (GDPR) | California, USA
(CCPA/CPRA)

Customers: Abena (Accra) | Lukas (Berlin) | Maria (Los Angeles)

Executive Summary

This Compliance Response Matrix analyses three simultaneous data deletion requests submitted to ShopGhana, a Ghanaian e-commerce platform operating globally. On the same day, three customers, one in Accra (Ghana), one in Berlin (Germany), and one in Los Angeles (California) , each submitted a request to delete their personal data. Each request is governed by a different legal framework: Ghana's Data Protection Act 2012 (Act 843), the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), and California's Consumer Privacy Act / California Privacy Rights Act (CCPA/CPRA).

The three requests present meaningfully different compliance obligations. Abena's request (Ghana) is governed by Act 843, which provides a qualified deletion right without a fixed statutory deadline. Lukas's request (GDPR) invokes the strongest of the three frameworks , the explicit Right to Erasure under Article 17 , with a binding 1-month response deadline and potential fines of up to €20 million for non-compliance. Maria's request (CCPA/CPRA) is complicated by an active return dispute that prevents immediate complete deletion, while her separate opt-out of data sale request must be honoured immediately.

This report provides: (1) a jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction legal rights analysis for each customer; (2) ShopGhana's specific obligations and action steps under each law; (3) a comparative law table across all three frameworks; and (4) draft response letters for each customer meeting the disclosure requirements of the applicable law.

Section 1: Compliance Response Matrix

The following matrix analyses each customer's legal rights, ShopGhana's obligations, response deadlines, data retention justifications, penalty exposure, and required disclosure , presented side-by-side across the three applicable legal frameworks.

Analysis Element	Customer A , Abena (Accra, Ghana) Ghana DPA Act 843	Customer B , Lukas (Berlin, Germany) GDPR Article 17	Customer C , Maria (Los Angeles, CA) CCPA / CPRA
CUSTOMER PROFILE	Account Age: 3 years Last Purchase: 8 months ago Outstanding: None Request: Full account & data deletion	Account Age: 1 year Last Purchase: 2 weeks ago (delivered) Outstanding: None Request: Full erasure under GDPR Art. 17	Account Age: 2 years Last Purchase: 6 months ago Outstanding: Active return dispute (20 days) Request: Delete account + stop data selling
Q1: Does a Legal Right to Deletion Exist?	YES , qualified right. Ghana's Data Protection Act 2012 (Act 843), Section 30, grants data subjects the right to request erasure of personal data that is no longer necessary, inaccurate, or processed unlawfully. Abena's account is 3 years old with no recent commercial activity (last purchase 8 months ago) and no outstanding obligations. Her data is no longer required for the purpose for which it was collected (facilitating active purchases). The right to deletion is therefore engaged.	YES , strong statutory right. GDPR Article 17 (Right to Erasure , 'Right to be Forgotten') grants Lukas an explicit right to request deletion of his personal data. He is invoking this right directly. The right is engaged on the ground that the data is no longer necessary for the purpose it was collected (Article 17(1)(a)) , the delivery is completed and there are no open transactions. GDPR Art. 17 is a stronger, more prescriptive right	YES , two distinct rights apply. Under CCPA (Cal. Civ. Code §1798.105) and its CPRA amendment, Maria has: (1) the Right to Delete personal information held by ShopGhana; and (2) the Right to Opt-Out of Sale or Sharing of her personal information (§1798.120). However, Maria has an active return dispute filed 20 days ago. This creates a significant complication: processing a deletion request

	However, Act 843 does not frame this as an absolute right , it is subject to conditions and exemptions related to legal obligations and legitimate interests (Sections 31–32).	than Ghana's DPA equivalent, with binding deadlines and penalties for non-compliance.	while an active business dispute is unresolved may compromise ShopGhana's ability to defend itself legally.
Q2: Exemptions & Conditions That Apply	Act 843, Section 32 , Exemptions: 1. Legal Obligation: ShopGhana may retain data required by Ghanaian financial law , including the Ghana Revenue Authority (GRA) requirements and Companies Act 2019 (Act 992) , which mandate retention of transaction records for a minimum of 6 years. 2. Legitimate Interest: Retention is lawful where it serves a compelling legitimate interest that overrides Abena's rights. 3. Legal Claims: Data may be retained if it is necessary for the establishment, exercise, or defence of legal claims. Since Abena has no outstanding orders or disputes and last purchased 8 months ago, exemptions 2	GDPR Article 17(3) , Exemptions: 1. Art. 17(3)(b) , Legal Obligation: ShopGhana must retain data necessary to comply with EU/German law (e.g., German Commercial Code , HGB §257 requires transaction records for 10 years; German Fiscal Code , AO §147 requires 6–10 years). 2. Art. 17(3)(e) , Legal Claims: Data may be retained for the establishment, exercise, or defence of legal claims. 3. Art. 17(3)(c) , Public Interest: Not applicable to commercial e-commerce. Since Lukas's delivery is completed and no dispute exists, exemption 1	CCPA §1798.105(d) , Exemptions: 1. Legal Obligation: Retention is permitted where required to comply with a legal obligation (e.g., California tax and financial record-keeping requirements). 2. Active Legal Dispute: Maria's open return dispute (filed 20 days ago) constitutes a legitimate basis to withhold complete deletion. ShopGhana needs the relevant transactional and dispute records to resolve or defend the claim. 3. Complete the Transaction: Data necessary to complete a transaction the

All other personal data (browsing history, preferences, marketing profiles) must be erased.	consumer requested may be retained. 4. Security & Fraud Prevention: Data used solely for security or fraud detection may be retained. The active return dispute is the decisive complication: deletion cannot be fully executed until the dispute is resolved.
Q3: ShopGhana's Specific Obligations & Action Steps	Step 1 , Acknowledge receipt of Abena's request within a reasonable time (Act 843 does not specify a fixed acknowledgement period; best practice: within 5 business days). Step 2 , Verify Abena's identity to confirm the request is from the data subject. Step 3 , Conduct a data inventory: identify all personal data held across all systems (account DB, email lists, analytics, payment processor, third-party delivery partners). Step 4 , Delete account data, profile	Step 1 , Acknowledge Lukas's request immediately (best practice: same day or within 72 hours). Step 2 , Verify Lukas's identity securely (GDPR Art. 12(6) , may request additional information to confirm identity). Step 3 , Respond to the erasure request within 1 month of receipt (Art. 12(3)). Step 4 , Erase all personal data not covered by a legal retention exemption: account profile, email address, browsing/purchase preference data,	Step 1 , Acknowledge Maria's deletion request within 10 business days (CCPA §1798.105(b)). Step 2 , Acknowledge her opt-out of data selling/sharing request: this must be honoured immediately , no time extension applies to opt-out requests (§1798.120). Stop sharing/selling Maria's data to third parties from the moment the request is received.

	information, marketing data, and browsing history. Step 5 , Retain financial/transactional records (purchase history, payment records) for the period required by Ghanaian financial law (minimum 6 years from transaction date , GRA guidelines). Step 6 , Notify third-party data processors (delivery partners, payment processors) to delete Abena's personal data where no legal retention basis exists. Step 7 , Communicate the outcome to Abena in writing, specifying what was deleted and what was retained and why.	marketing profiles, cookies/device identifiers. Step 5 , Retain financial transaction records for the period required under German law (HGB §257: up to 10 years for commercial transaction records). Step 6 , Notify all third-party processors and sub-processors (Art. 17(2)): instruct them to erase Lukas's data. Document this notification. Step 7 , If ShopGhana cannot erase all data within 1 month, notify Lukas of the extension (up to 2 additional months) with reasons (Art. 12(3)). Step 8 , Confirm deletion in writing to Lukas, detailing what was erased and what was retained under legal exemption.	Step 3 , Assess the active return dispute. Inform Maria that complete deletion of dispute-related records is temporarily suspended pending resolution of the open return claim (§1798.105(d)(1) exemption). Step 4 , Delete all personal data not related to the active dispute: marketing data, browsing history, account profile, saved preferences, third-party data sharing records. Step 5 , Notify all third-party data recipients to delete Maria's data (§1798.105(c)). Step 6 , Once the return dispute is resolved, complete the deletion of remaining transaction/dispute records subject to applicable California financial retention law. Step 7 , Confirm all actions to Maria in writing within 45 days of her request, with a plain-language explanation of what was done, what was retained, and why.

Q4: Response Deadline	Act 843 does not specify a precise response deadline in calendar days. The Act requires that data subject requests be responded to 'within a reasonable time' , interpreted by the Ghana Data Protection Commission (DPC) as a best-practice standard of 21 days. ShopGhana should: acknowledge within 5 business days and complete the deletion/retention analysis within 21 days.	GDPR Article 12(3): Response required within 1 calendar month of receiving the valid request. Extension: If the request is complex or numerous, the deadline may be extended by up to 2 additional months (total 3 months), but ShopGhana must notify Lukas within the initial 1-month period of the extension and its reasons. If ShopGhana does not respond at all within 1 month: Lukas has the right to lodge a complaint with the German supervisory authority (Bundesbeauftragter für den Datenschutz , BfDI) and seek judicial remedy.	CCPA §1798.105(b): ShopGhana must acknowledge receipt of Maria's deletion request within 10 business days. CCPA §1798.105(b): Complete deletion (or verified communication of the deletion action taken) must occur within 45 calendar days of receipt. Extension: A further 45-day extension is permitted if reasonably necessary, but Maria must be notified before the initial 45-day deadline expires, with an explanation of the reason for the delay. Opt-out of sale: Must be actioned immediately upon receipt , no extension applies.

			POST-DISPUTE: Complete remaining deletion once dispute is resolved.
Q6: Penalties for Non-Compliance	Act 843, Section 72 , Criminal Penalties: • Failure to comply with a data subject request: up to 10,000 penalty units (approx. GHS 120,000+ at current rates) and/or imprisonment. • The Ghana Data Protection Commission may investigate, issue enforcement notices, and refer cases for prosecution. • Reputational risk: DPC publishes enforcement decisions publicly. Note: Act 843's enforcement has historically been less aggressive than GDPR, but the DPC is increasingly active.	GDPR Article 83 , Administrative Fines: • Tier 1 (Art. 83(4)): Up to €10 million or 2% of global annual turnover (whichever is higher) for procedural violations. • Tier 2 (Art. 83(5)): Up to €20 million or 4% of global annual turnover for violations of data subject rights , including failure to honour an erasure request. • A missed 1-month deadline without valid extension justification is a direct Art. 17 violation. • Lukas may also seek civil damages under Art. 82 and file complaints with the BfDI (German DPA). • GDPR penalties apply to ShopGhana as a non-EU company if it targets EU customers , confirmed by Art.	CCPA/CPRA , Civil Penalties & Private Right of Action: • California AG enforcement: Up to $2,500 per unintentional violation and $7,500 per intentional violation. • CPRA established the California Privacy Protection Agency (CPPA) with independent enforcement powers. • Private right of action (§1798.150): Consumers may sue directly for data breaches , statutory damages of $100–$750 per consumer per incident, or actual damages (whichever is greater). • Failure to honour opt-out of sale requests is a particularly high-

		3(2) extraterritorial scope.	risk violation given CPRA's strengthened opt-out provisions.
Q7: What Must Be Disclosed to the Customer	Act 843, Section 30 , ShopGhana must inform Abena: 1. Confirmation that her deletion request has been received 2. What personal data has been deleted 3. What data, if any, is being retained, under which legal basis, and for how long 4. The right to contact the Ghana Data Protection Commission if she is dissatisfied	GDPR Art. 12 & 17 , ShopGhana must inform Lukas: 1. Acknowledgement that his Art. 17 request has been received 2. Confirmation of erasure (or reasons why erasure cannot be completed for certain data) 3. Specific legal basis for any retained data (Art. 17(3) exemptions cited explicitly) 4. If an extension is needed: written notice within 1 month with reason for delay 5. His right to lodge a complaint with the BfDI (German supervisory authority) 6. His right to seek judicial remedy under Art. 79	CCPA §1798.105 & §1798.130 , ShopGhana must inform Maria: 1. Acknowledgement within 10 business days that her request was received 2. Confirmation of which data was deleted and which was retained under exemption 3. That her opt-out of data sale/sharing has been actioned immediately 4. A clear explanation of the active dispute exemption and when full deletion will occur 5. Her right to appeal the decision and contact the California Privacy Protection Agency (CPPA) 6. That she will not face discrimination for exercising her CCPA rights (§1798.125)

Section 2: Comparative Regulatory Framework Table

The following table provides a direct side-by-side comparison of the three applicable data protection frameworks across seven key dimensions, enabling ShopGhana's compliance team to identify cross-jurisdictional similarities, divergences, and gaps in its current policies.

Comparison Element	Ghana DPA (Act 843, 2012)	GDPR (EU, 2018)	CCPA / CPRA (California, 2020/2023)
Right to Deletion Exists?	YES , Qualified right under Section 30. Data subjects may request deletion of data no longer necessary for its purpose or processed unlawfully. Not absolute , subject to exemptions.	YES , Explicit 'Right to Erasure' under Article 17. Stronger than Ghana's equivalent; applies to multiple grounds including withdrawal of consent and no longer necessary data. Broadly applicable.	YES , Right to Delete under §1798.105 (CCPA) and strengthened under CPRA. Also includes the distinct Right to Opt-Out of Sale/Sharing of personal information (§1798.120).
Exemptions / Conditions	Sections 31–32: Legal obligation; exercise of public functions; research/journalism public interest; establishment or defence of legal claims; compelling legitimate interest.	Article 17(3): Legal obligation; public interest or official authority; archiving/research/statistics in public interest; exercise or defence of legal claims; freedom of expression.	§1798.105(d): Legal obligation; security/fraud prevention; completing a requested transaction; research in the public interest; free speech; active legal dispute (claim/defence).
Response Deadline	No fixed statutory deadline. Ghana DPC best-practice guidance: respond within 21 days. Acknowledge within 5 business days recommended.	Article 12(3): 1 calendar month from receipt of valid request. Extendable by 2 further months for complex/numerous requests (with notification to data subject within initial 1-month window).	§1798.105(b): Acknowledge within 10 business days. Complete deletion action within 45 calendar days. Extendable by 45 further days with prior notification to consumer and stated reason.

Comparison Element	Ghana DPA (Act 843, 2012)	GDPR (EU, 2018)	CCPA / CPRA (California, 2020/2023)
Penalties for Non-Compliance	Act 843, s.72: Up to 10,000 penalty units (~GHS 120,000+) and/or imprisonment. DPC may issue enforcement notices and refer for prosecution. Enforcement historically less aggressive than GDPR.	GDPR Art. 83(5): Up to €20 million or 4% of global annual turnover (whichever is higher) for data subject rights violations. Civil damages under Art. 82. Supervisory authority complaints.	AG/CPPA enforcement: $2,500 per unintentional / $7,500 per intentional violation. Private right of action for data breaches: $100–$750 per consumer per incident (§1798.150). CPPA has independent enforcement authority.
Consent Requirements	Section 18: Personal data must be collected with the knowledge and consent of the data subject (informed, freely given). Specific conditions for lawful processing; no explicit 'lawful bases' list as detailed as GDPR.	Article 6 , Six lawful bases: consent, contract, legal obligation, vital interests, public task, legitimate interests. Consent (Art. 7) must be freely given, specific, informed, and unambiguous. GDPR does not require consent where another lawful basis applies.	CCPA: No prior opt-in consent requirement for most data collection. Requires a privacy notice at collection (§1798.100). CPRA: Sensitive personal information requires opt-in consent for use beyond specified purposes. Opt-out of sale/sharing is a consumer right exercisable at any time.
Territorial Scope	Applies to data controllers operating in Ghana or processing data of persons in Ghana.	Extraterritorial (Art. 3(2)): Applies to any organisation, wherever located, that targets or monitors EU residents , including non-EU companies like ShopGhana serving German customers.	Applies to for-profit businesses doing business in California that meet threshold criteria (annual gross revenue >$25M; OR buy/sell/share personal data of 100,000+ consumers/households; OR derive 50%+ of revenue from selling personal data).

Data Subject Rights Beyond Deletion	Right to access (s.27), right to object (s.30), right to rectification (s.28), right to restrict processing.	Right of access (Art. 15), rectification (Art. 16), restriction (Art. 18), portability (Art. 20), to object (Art. 21), not to be subject to automated decisions (Art. 22).	Right to know (§1798.110), right to portability, right to correct (CPRA), right to opt-out of sale/sharing, right to limit use of sensitive PI (CPRA), right to non-discrimination (§1798.125).

Key Cross-Jurisdictional Observation: All three frameworks recognise a right to deletion, but the strength, scope, and enforceability of that right differ significantly. GDPR is the most prescriptive and heavily enforced, with the largest penalty exposure. CCPA/CPRA is the most consumer-centric, with a unique opt-out-of-sale right not present in the other frameworks. Ghana's Act 843 is the least prescriptive in terms of deadlines and penalties but is actively enforced by the Ghana DPC and should not be treated as a lower-priority obligation. ShopGhana, as a company registered in Ghana serving customers globally, must simultaneously satisfy all three frameworks , a compliance architecture requiring a jurisdiction-aware data subject rights management system.

Section 4: Practical Implementation Challenges for ShopGhana

4.1 Simultaneous Multi-Jurisdictional Compliance

ShopGhana faces the core challenge of any globally operating business: a single data infrastructure must satisfy three different legal frameworks simultaneously, each with different deadlines, different exemption structures, and different disclosure requirements. A deletion request that is lawfully handled under Act 843 may be insufficient under GDPR. A response that satisfies CCPA may not address the disclosure requirements of Act 843. ShopGhana requires a jurisdiction-aware data subject rights management (DSRM) system that automatically identifies the applicable legal framework based on the customer's jurisdiction, routes the request to the correct compliance workflow, and generates jurisdiction-appropriate responses within the applicable deadline.

4.2 Data Mapping as a Pre-Condition for Effective Deletion

A deletion request cannot be honoured without a comprehensive, accurate, and current data map: a record of every system, database, third-party processor, and data category where each customer's personal information is held. Without this, ShopGhana risks confirming a deletion to Lukas while residual data remains in a legacy analytics database or a third-party email marketing platform, creating a false compliance record that, if discovered by the BfDI, constitutes an aggravated GDPR violation. Building and maintaining a data inventory (Record of Processing Activities, ROPA, as required by GDPR Art. 30) is the foundational technical pre-condition for scalable deletion compliance.

4.3 Third-Party Processor Compliance

ShopGhana's deletion obligations extend beyond its own systems. GDPR Article 17(2) explicitly requires that ShopGhana notify all processors to whom Lukas's data has been disclosed, instructing them to erase it. The same principle applies under CCPA §1798.105(c) (notify third parties) and Act 843's accountability principles. ShopGhana must maintain a current register of all third-party data processors (delivery partners, payment processors, email marketing platforms, analytics providers) and must have Data Processing Agreements (DPAs) in place that contractually obligate each processor to honour deletion instructions within a defined timeframe.

4.4 The Active Dispute Complication (Maria / CCPA)

Maria's case illustrates a tension inherent in all data deletion frameworks: the right to erasure versus the right of a business to defend itself against legal claims. Deleting all of Maria's personal data while her return dispute is active would compromise ShopGhana's ability to resolve or defend the claim, potentially leaving the company unable to verify what was purchased, when, and at what price. The CCPA §1798.105(d) exemption for active disputes is the correct mechanism here, but ShopGhana must apply it narrowly: only dispute-related records may be retained, and the retention must cease as soon as the dispute is resolved. Applying the exemption too broadly, retaining more data than strictly necessary for the dispute, would itself be a CCPA violation.

4.5 Retention Period Conflicts Across Jurisdictions

ShopGhana faces a retention period conflict: German law (HGB §257) requires retention of commercial records for up to 10 years; Ghanaian law (GRA guidelines) requires a minimum of 6 years; California law requires retention periods aligned with the purpose of collection. Where a single customer's data must satisfy multiple jurisdictions, for example, a Ghanaian customer who later relocated to Germany , ShopGhana must apply the most protective standard (longest lawful retention period required by any applicable law) while ensuring that retained data is not used for any purpose beyond the legal obligation that justifies retention.

Conclusion

This Compliance Response Matrix has demonstrated that ShopGhana's simultaneous receipt of three data deletion requests , one under each of Ghana's Act 843, the GDPR, and the CCPA/CPRA , creates a layered compliance obligation that cannot be satisfied by a single, generic deletion protocol. Each framework confers meaningfully different rights, imposes different deadlines, and carries different penalty exposure.

The most urgent action is Lukas's GDPR erasure request, which carries the largest penalty exposure (up to €20 million or 4% of global turnover) and the shortest fixed deadline (1 calendar month). The most complex action is Maria's CCPA request, requiring an immediate opt-out of data sale and a phased deletion approach pending resolution of her active return dispute. Abena's Act 843 request must be handled with equivalent seriousness despite the absence of a fixed statutory deadline , the Ghana DPC's increasingly active enforcement posture makes non-compliance a genuine legal risk.

ShopGhana's long-term solution is a unified privacy governance infrastructure: a jurisdiction-aware DSRM system, a comprehensive ROPA data map, contractually compliant third-party processor agreements, and a trained Data Protection Officer with multi-jurisdictional expertise. The ability to respond accurately, completely, and on time to data subject requests from any jurisdiction is not merely a legal compliance obligation , it is a core component of customer trust and a market differentiator in the global e-commerce landscape.
